Privacy and Cookies

Aquis places great importance on protecting the privacy of its customers and users. Aquis will process any personal information it collects in accordance with the Data Protection Act 1998.

When you enter into a contract with Aquis for its products or services, you may be asked to submit personal information about yourself in order to receive or use these products or services. This information may include, for example, your name, address, job title, telephone number, email address and financial information necessary to conclude the contract and enable administration and management of such products or services. Aquis will only collect information that is necessary for it to provide you with the product or service that you have requested. The type of information that Aquis may collect will depend on the nature of that product or service.

Where Aquis collects personal information, Aquis will use it for administration and to tailor its service and/or products to match your needs. Aquis may also use personal information to conduct market research surveys, for statistical analysis and for direct marketing purposes relating to its business.

Third parties and transfer of data abroad

Aquis may use the services of third parties to help in certain areas, such as website hosting, marketing and conducting market research. In some cases Aquis may need to provide your information to the relevant third party. Aquis may also transfer data between itself and certain other parties, such as shareholders, outside of the EEA.

Where your Personal Data is transferred to a third party or outside the EEA, Aquis will ensure that the recipient agrees to keep this information confidential and hold it securely in accordance with the requirements of the Data Protection Act 1998.

Cookies

In addition to the information that Aquis collects as described above, Aquis uses Google Analytics to collect anonymous information about the use of the website. This does not allow Aquis to identify individual users; it simply enables Aquis to compile statistics about visitors and their use of the website, such as which pages of the website have been viewed, which countries visits come from and other such information.

The Google Analytics tool uses “cookies”, which are text files placed on your computer, to collect standard Internet log information and visitor behaviour information in an anonymous form. The information generated by the cookies about your use of the website (including IP address) is transmitted to Google. This information is then used to evaluate how visitors use the website and to compile statistical reports that Aquis uses to optimise and improve its website.

Most web browsers accept cookies by default, however if you do not wish to have cookies placed on your computer, you can change the settings of your web browser to decline cookies.

You can find out more about cookies and how to remove them from your browser by visiting www.allaboutcookies.org.
